

Ann Stressman

Ann Stressman of Fremont, Michigan, has been a passionate advocate for children in the world of foster care and adoption for more than two decades. After years of training at the local and state levels, along with being a foster and adoptive parent herself, Stressman offers those insights that bridge the gap between the foster parents and the children she hopes will benefit most from this information. She combines Dr. Payne's "hidden rules of class" with practical parenting information that sheds new and surprising light on the subject. Stressman earned her master's degree from Western Michigan University and holds Michigan social work and teaching certificates.
